

Pathways for Women in Supply Chain

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY
FISHER COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

Scarlet Sponsors

JPMORGAN CHASE & CO.

Grey Sponsors

Brutus Sponsor

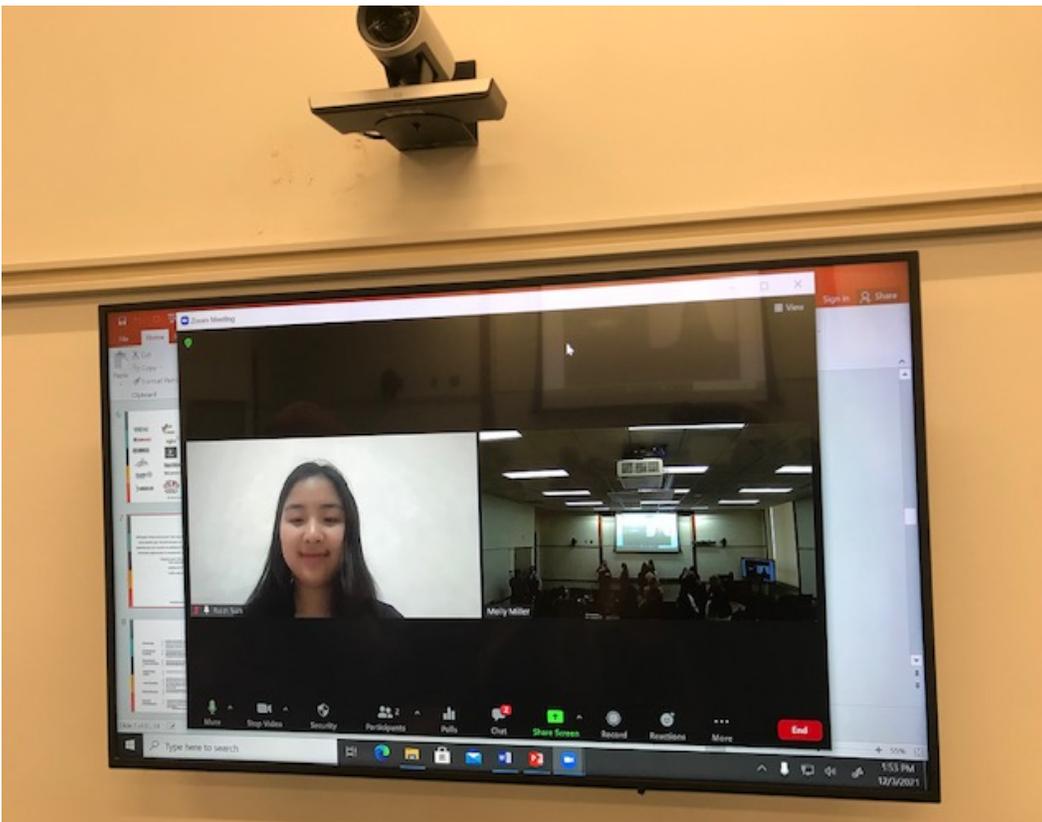

Year 6, Newsletter 4, December 17, 2021

The Pathways Scholars program and Fisher College of Business are pleased to welcome DHL as a new corporate sponsor. Dr. Ken Boyer, founder of the Pathways Scholars Program said “we are looking forward to partnering with DHL corporate representatives to educate and develop future leaders. The Pathways Program continues to provide learning and mentorship opportunities for these young women to meet with representatives from industry leaders in many sectors.

On Friday, December 3rd, the Pathways Scholars hosted representatives from corporate sponsor, JPMorgan Chase & Co. James Flynn, Executive Director; Nicole Alexander, VP, Business Development Sourcing for Supplier Diversity; Sidney Matheny, CAPD Analyst and Erica Schwartz, Digital Product Associate, met with the Scholars on campus where they provided an overview of JPMorgan Chase’s supply chain function as well as sharing details about Chase’s Racial Equity Commitment and Supplier Diversity’s role within their organization.

Below, JP Morgan Chase employees, Erica Schwartz, a 2019 Fisher College of Business graduate, and Sidney Matheny share their individual experiences within Chase's CADP (Corporate Analyst Development Program), a two-year rotational program which offers the unique opportunity to sharpen technical, analytical and leadership skills. It involves three eight-month rotations within the program's core disciplines - analytics, project management, and process improvement – across the lines of business and corporate functions. The program is designed to develop general management and operations experience, while providing the opportunity for flexibility in an associate's career direction.

Ruizi Sun, Pathways Scholar, joining virtually from her home in Dashiqiao, China. We are looking forward to meeting Ruizi in person next semester.

Pathways Scholars with JP Morgan Chase Corporate Representatives and Dr. Mi Kyong Newsom, Faculty Advisor

We wish the scholars good luck on their exams this week. As we wrap up our first semester of this academic year, we want to thank our corporate sponsors for your support of the Pathways Scholars Program and commitment to developing opportunities for women in supply chain.

Finally, we wish all of you a happy, healthy and festive holiday season!

Go Bucks!